“ I have so many memories of my babygirl. Memories of her waiting by the door for me every day, or her stealing an Arby's sandwich, but taking it downstairs to put in her bowl. Her coming to her human daddy as he had seizures and helping him out of them, finding and cuddling me whenever I felt sick, and her learning how to yell "Mama" when she needed or wanted me. Her love of cheese, especially mac & cheese, was the only thing that rivaled the strength of our love for her. This sweet girl would stay with me every moment of every day if she could, and hated when I left. We've had her since four months into our marriage. Isis was everything to us. She was everything to me. I'm going to miss you, Babygirl.
