“ I’ve never had a cat who had a cat of his own. When we brought in a small kitten named tiny, we thought WE were rescuing a kitten. You thought we’d brought you your own Pet. You’d crawl in our arms and tuck your head down to sleep, and your cat would patiently wait for you at our feet. During the day, you’d cuddle up with him when you both finished with your canned chicken. Eventually your brothers and sister grew to accept this change. Travis cat, Last night was the first night tiny slept at our feet without you. It was the 3rd night we went to bed without our boy waking up his cat pappy at 6:30 every am or clearing the entire bed in the last minute dash to join your rowdy siblings before lights out. It’s not about the paw prints you left on counter, the living grass snakes you’d bring in from the yard or the pink and white mouse you tried to stash in our closet; It’s about the loud purrs and chin rubs you’d bring before bedtime, the remote you’d keep warm stashed under your arms while you slept, the ball games you’d attentively watch with us and the paw prints you left like wet nosed kisses on our hearts. In memory of the greatest blessing on four paws, we love and miss you Trav
